COMING SOON... COUNTRY MUSIC'S X FACTOR

"GREAT MUSIC AND GREAT GUYS. THIS IS RIGHT DOWN COUNTRY MUSIC MAIN STREET USA. THEIR HARMONIES AND ENERGY ARE INFECTIOUS."
- CLAY HUNNICUTT, VP OF COUNTRY PROGRAMMING/CLEAR CHANNEL

ACM Slump? Depends Who You Ask

Trying to figure out the impact the ACM show had on country record sales is not as easy as it might sound. All kinds of factors cloud the issue. The general feeling around Music Row after the post-ACM sales figures were released was one of disappointment. Capitol/Nashville VP/Sales Bill Kennedy summed up the feelings of many, saying, "It was a tough week indeed – actually you can argue most albums decreased from the week before. We did see single digital track sales increase, however – a product of the fans heading straight to their computers."

"In past years, the ACM's were good for about a 20% lift in album sales. But that's certainly not the case this year. The show going head-to-head with both American Idol and Dancing With the Stars certainly was a key factor. It seems like a fairly substantial lost opportunity."

A large part of the "lost opportunity" came as the result of lost viewers. USA Today reported last week that prime-time Nielsen Ratings showed the ACM's averaged a record low 9.3 million viewers, down by nearly three million viewers from last year.

Looking at the sales figures for the week after the ACM award show, Lyric Street VP/Marketing Greg McCarn notes that Country sales were down 15% from the week before, taking out new releases. (Including the 78,000+ units sold by Gretchen Wilson and John Anderson in their debut weeks results in sales being down 2%.)

Tow Gear: A KSCS/Dallas station van is pulled from the mud at this past weekend's Country Thunder concert. The tow chain is mired in the muck.

Country Thunder Struck By Rain

The Country Thunder music festival, scheduled for this past Thursday (5/24) through Sunday (5/27) in Waxahachie, Texas lived up to its name, and then some. Rainstorms altered the lineup Thursday night, though Big & Rich and Gretchen Wilson played to the smaller remaining crowd. Friday's lineup, which included Neal McCoy, Randy Rogers Band and Pat Green, was completely cancelled. The rain let up a bit on Saturday and all acts went on as scheduled, including Reba McEntire and Cross Canadian Ragweed, but Sunday's shows, including Montgomery Gentry and headliner George Strait, were scrapped due to a second deluge.

KSCS/Dallas PD Chris Huff told Country Aircheck: "Just to give you a little background, the concert site was set up in a 300 acre field about an hour south of Dallas. This field accommodated all of the activities: stage, vendors, parking and camping. That's normally not a problem, but throw in two or three inches of rain, and the field of dirt becomes a field of mud. Even though the rain stopped Saturday afternoon, it was still so muddy at the end of the night that it took me 30 minutes to slip and slide my way to a paved road.

"The cancellation of Sunday's shows meant that we were able to rescue our promotions crew which had been living in RVs since Thursday. We left their vehicles in the mud and went back down Monday to pull them out. Thank goodness for all the nearby farmers who had shown up in their tractors to help tow people, otherwise we might still be stuck there!"

SHE REALLY LOVES ME OR SHE DON'T REALLY LOVE ME ANYMORE

Dear Lance: Me and my girl have been together five years. We've had our ups and downs like the time I got drunk and said her momma looked like Jabba the Hut. Things have been good lately.

But the other day she called me up, as I was walking to my truck at five past five. She said, I know you've had a rough week, why don't you grab a few drinks with the guys.

As I was driving, I was thinking, she never liked me drinking after work before.

Either she really loves me or she don't really love me anymore. -Frightened After Five

Dear Frightened After Five: Sounds like there ain't nothing really wrong that I can put my finger on, but something ain't quite right.

Offer to go to dinner at her momma's and start picking up your laundry. She'll like that. Sounds like she really loves you.

-Lance

"She Really Loves Me" on radio stations all over the country.

Dear Lance:

I used to hold a very high-level position where I enjoyed great success. Okay, I did make a few mistakes and some people think my career was blown.

But history has shown I really did a great deal for our economy. I now get asked to do charity work and I feel more popular than ever.

My wife, who's always been a bit of a pain has now decided she wants my old job.

Why would she go and do a thing like that?

That job was the one accomplishment she didn't have. -Worried William

Dear Worried William: Sounds like your lady wears the pants in your family and now she wants the whole world to know she's the boss.

I hate to tell you buddy, but she don't really love you anymore. -Lance

ACM Sales Slump

Now, before you declare that a disaster, consider what happened the week before the ACM's. Sales consultant Neal Spielberg points out that week included Mother's Day, which he says often ranks as the third best sales week of the year – behind the December holidays and Valentine's Day. So, when trying to determine if there was an ACM-related bump, it's important to consider Mother's Day-week sales. McCarn says that with adjustments for new releases and the decay of second week releases, Mother's Day week was up 17% over the week prior.

Using the same methodology, Mother's Day week 2005 had a 20% increase, with a 24% decrease the following week. MDW '06 had a 22% gain, with a 32% decline the next week. Two weeks later, after the '06 ACM show, sales jumped 28%, again using McCarn's adjusted methodology. Reiterating the 2007 results: Mother's Day week was up 17%, and the immediate next week, ACM week, was down 15%. As you can see, measuring the ACM's sales impact following a regular sales week and after a Mother's Day sales week are two very different comparisons.

Yet another way to look at the ACM's impact on sales is to check the sales results for performers and award winner. An analysis by Lyric Street's Dir./Marketing Heather Conley comparing this year's post-ACM show sales to two weeks ago finds that the average sales increase among ACM winners and performers was 24%. She told Country Aircheck, "There are so many variables, it is very hard to pinpoint the impact of the ACM show on sales. But our take away was that it did make an impact."

The big winners among performers, according to Conley (percentage of increase over the week before): George Strait, +32%; Little Big Town, +16%; Rodney Atkins, +9%; and, Taylor Swift, +7%. Brooks & Dunn posted a 4% gain while Rascal Flatts had a 2% increase.

Pretty In Pink: Columbia's Miranda Lambert pulled a prank on Dierks Bentley recently while opening for him at Topeka's Kansas Expo Center. Lambert brought him her signature pink guitar between songs instead of the guitar he was expecting his guitar tech to bring. He couldn't make it through the first verse without cracking up, and payback plans are said to be in motion.
